

To allow people to call you after you have cancelled their services would be harassment. Obviously we don't want to deal with this business any more since we cancelled their services and we must have had a good reason. Who would want this law changed? If these companies want to regain my business, a letter documenting what they can do for me will go a LOT further than harassing phone calls.